T1 Singular value decomposition of helmholtz equation for acoustic radiation

JF 數位化論文典藏聯盟 (Digital Dissertation Consortium)

YR 1994

AB A computational study of the use of singular value decomposition (SVD) with the surface Helmholtz integral equation was initiated. The surface pressure matrix, which is singular at characteristic wavenumbers, was calculated with the CHIEF program developed by the U.S. Navy. Singular value decomposition was performed using IMSL/Math library. A problem with the single precision SVD subroutine was encountered; both positive and negative singular values were returned. After a series of calculations using three models, a cube, a rectangular box, and a cylinder, it was concluded that the IMSL SVD subroutine, at least in single precision, is poorly suited to the problem. Double precision complex calculations were not attempted. In extensions of this study, the algorithm in CHIEF that generates least-squares solutions should be investigated. It is likely that this algorithm can be modified to provide best-fit solutions equivalent to those obtained using the pseudo-inverse approach.

ESSAYS ON FORCES UNDERLYING 2008 FINANCIAL CRISIS CREDIT RATING AGENCIES AND INVESTMENT

Chapter 1

Structural Shifts in Credit Rating Agencies

1.1 Introduction

Credit rating agencies have been under heavy scrutiny and popular criticism regarding the "loose" standards of Enron and WorldCom, which led to the financial crisis in 1997, which was followed by the financial crisis in 2008. The financial crisis further elevated the importance of the company financials and credit ratings in the investment grade long-term issuer rating market. The financial crisis further elevated the importance of the company financials and credit ratings in the investment grade long-term issuer rating market. The financial crisis further elevated the importance of the company financials and credit ratings in the investment grade long-term issuer rating market.

³"The Rating Agencies," Congressional Financial Crisis, Congressional Hearing, September 10, 2008.

Although the mass media has already sentenced the rating agencies for employing loose standards, a more formal investigation is necessary before drawing firm conclusions. More specifically, it is important to examine whether the rating agencies indeed relaxed their standards, particularly in the recent periods of interest such as the Dot-Com crash and the current subprime crisis. In this paper, I study whether the credit rating agencies tighten or loosen the corporate ratings during the period 1985 - 2007. I report two main findings: First, I find that between 1985-2002, there is a divergent pattern between investment grade and speculative grade rating standards. That is, the rating agencies tighten the standards for investment grade ratings, while relaxing the standards for speculative grade ratings. Second, I find that around 2002, there is a sharp structural break towards "more stringent" ratings in both investment grade and speculative grade rating categories.

My first major finding is a puzzling divergent pattern between investment grade and speculative grade standards during 1985-2002. As in Blume, Lim, and Mackinlay (1998) (henceforth BLM), I find that the investment grade ratings tighten during this period. Holding firm characteristics constant, the tightening amounts to an average of 1.1 notches for investment grade ratings. However, in contrast to investment grade ratings, speculative grade ratings loosen 0.6 notches during the same period. The loosening of standards in speculative grade ratings is consistent with the widespread criticism of agencies during the Dot-Com crash. Before 2002, the tightening trend in standards shown by BLM pertains only to the investment grade category, where the default rates are rare in any case. However, consistent with the popular wisdom, the rating agencies were indeed getting looser in their

The deconstruction of the stereotype of the latin american female and racial myth in love in the time of cholera by gabriel garcia marquez

by Capellan, Frank , M.A. , Southern Connecticut State University, 2008, 117Pages, AAT 1452175

Literature 文學 / Latin American 拉丁美洲文學

原 件: PDF全文

論文摘要:

The subject of this thesis is a critical and theoretical analysis of the female characters Fermina Daza, Miss Barbara Lynch, Leona Cassiani and the widow of Nazaret in Love in the Time of Cholera. I emphasize the aesthetic and historical conflicts between Latin America and Spain, as well as the reality of the Latin-America of today as viewed in the fiction of Gabriel Garcia Marquez. Chapter one explores the theme of love through commentaries from Octavio Paz, Sara Sefchovich, Alice Walker, Carlos Fuentes, Plinio Apuleyo Mendoza and Mario Vargas Llosa. Chapter two focuses on the stereotype of the Latin-American female and racial myths within the text. Male characters Florentino Ariza, Doctor Juvenal Urbino and Lorenzo Daza are also analyzed from a historical and political perspective. The careful analysis of the female characters developed in this thesis are of utmost importance not just because it is written by a male author, but rather, because of the way it is done in relationship to voice, race, and the opposition between the character role of subject vs. object.
